Black was elected as an Independent. He supported the Liberal Conservatives. Vickery and Purdy were very close in election results with Vickery a few votes in the lead, which showed him to be ahead, but as the result of some obvious "ballot-stuffing". Purdy was nonetheless declared duly elected on the Sheriff's return. Since the election was clearly illegal, another was anticipated, which Purdy felt confident of winning. On March 11, 1875, his resignation was read in the House, and he was commended for his action replaced by Edward Vickery - Declared duly elected, writ amended, and took seat March 12, 1875. Purdy subsequently controverted Vickery's return on the ground that the election was known to be illegal, but the petition was discharged when he failed to push it.

Townshend, Charles James	Liberal Conservative	1209

Black was elected as an Independent. He supported the Liberal Conservatives. Vickery and Purdy were very close in election results with Vickery a few votes in the lead, which showed him to be ahead, but as the result of some obvious "ballot-stuffing". Purdy was nonetheless declared duly elected on the Sheriff's return. Since the election was clearly illegal, another was anticipated, which Purdy felt confident of winning. On March 11, 1875, his resignation was read in the House, and he was commended for his action replaced by Edward Vickery - Declared duly elected, writ amended, and took seat March 12, 1875. Purdy subsequently controverted Vickery's return on the ground that the election was known to be illegal, but the petition was discharged when he failed to push it.
