SPEAKER'S RULING

“On October 30, 2008, the honourable member for Halifax Clayton Park rose on a point of privilege relating to the events, she alleges, of some significance, that it impeded or prevented her from doing her work as a member of the Public Accounts Committee and as a member of this House.

In a nutshell, the honourable member alleges the government refused to provide full access to the Auditor General in his audit of the so-called Nominee Program. That situation, she alleges, prevented her from fulfilling her responsibilities in her role as a member of this House. From information provided by other members and through my investigation of the Hansard reports of the Public Accounts Committee meetings, it clearly appears that access to files and information was provided to the Auditor General submission for his audit purposes.

The Public Accounts Committee had, at one point, issued subpoenas to the appropriate government officials directing them to release the information. The same committee withdrew the subpoenas when it was determined - through testimony of our Auditor General - that he had received the information he had been trying to obtain in order to effectively conduct his audit. Therefore, in my opinion, there is no prima facie breach of privilege. This decision is based on the facts as I have been able to determine them in the Hansard reports of the Public Accounts Committee, which I have here.

I thank the honourable members for their interventions in this matter and, in particular, the information provided to us by the Chair of the Public Accounts Committee. Thank you.”
