SPEAKER'S RULING

Before we begin the daily routine, I will bring some words on the point of order as brought up by the member for Sydney-Whitney Pier on Friday with respect to the words "misled" and "misleading." I thought I had heard the honourable New Democratic Party House Leader say that another member intentionally misled the House.

Today I reviewed Hansard from Friday to see that, in fact, I had misheard, so the member for Sydney-Whitney Pier's point of order is well taken.

I think it is a good time to clarify for all members of the House the playing field with respect to the two words that I have referred to: misled and misleading. There is a good explanation by a Speaker of the House of Commons. On March 7, 1974, Speaker Lamoureux made a ruling that touches on the principles underlying the parliamentary practice in question. He said:

"The hon. Member knows the rules very well. We have heard this hundreds of times over the years. The hon. Member has heard it. We all know it is not unparliamentary to suggest that another member has made misrepresentations or misled the House. What is unparliamentary and has been ruled on very often is to suggest that it was intentional, wilful - that kind of concept. When a minister or member tells another member he has misled the House, I am sure there is no suggestion that the statement should be withdrawn. According to the rules . . . it becomes a matter of debate between the two members concerning who is right and who is wrong."

In other words, as we say in this Chamber many times, a disagreement of facts.

That being said, there is a grey area in which those words could be found to be unparliamentary in the particular circumstances. The Speaker could deem an assertion that another member has "misled the House" (without a direct reference to the misleading having been intentional) to be a breach of order if other remarks framed the assertion in such a way to imply that the misleading was intentional.

The Speaker can look at other parts of what is being said and the manner in which it is said to determine the overall effect of the speech on order in the House. This overall authority is explained well in Bosc and Gagnon on Page 624. A quote from Bosc and Gagnon:

“In dealing with unparliamentary language, the Speaker takes into account the tone, manner and intention of the Member speaking; the person to whom the words at issue were directed; the degree of provocation; and, most importantly, whether or not the remarks created disorder in the Chamber. Thus, language deemed unparliamentary one day may not necessarily be deemed unparliamentary on another day. The codification of unparliamentary language has proven impractical as it is the context in which words or phrases are used that the Chair must consider when deciding whether or not they should be withdrawn. Although an expression may be found to be acceptable, the Speaker has cautioned that any language which leads to disorder in the House should not be used.”

In conclusion, a claim that a member is deliberately misleading the House or has deliberately misled the House is unparliamentary. The Speaker can intervene in the interest of preserving order if the Speaker determines that a claim that another member has misled the House is delivered in a manner that the Speaker determines to have implied intention or in a manner that the Speaker finds has caused disorder in the House.

That was not the case on Friday, but I think it's important that all members are aware of the factors that the Chair can consider. Again, the point of order is upheld.

SPEAKER'S RULING

Yesterday the honourable House Leader for the Official Opposition rose on a point of order which, when I read in Hansard, was phrased in the form of a question about the Rules of the House. He asked, "... is it necessary to create a new subsection under Clause 13 for conduct of members, since the Premier repeatedly mischaracterizes what members on the opposite side of the House say to suit his own narrative?"

Today the honourable Leader of the Official Opposition began to make a point of order in the same vein; that is, he was objecting to what he felt were various misrepresentations by the Premier on his positions of matters. Simply put, there is no point of order.

If the Premier or any other member of this House asserts, for example, that the Leader of the Opposition or any other member of this House has taken different positions on a matter at different times, it is not the job of this Chair to adjudicate whether that is the case.

The Leader of the Official Opposition and all members have freedom of speech in this Chamber, and all members, including the Leader, are quite capable of asserting themselves in this disagreement. The Chair will not be drawn into a disagreement between members over facts.

PUBLIC BILLS FOR THIRD READING

Hon. G. Wilson, Minister of Environment, moved third reading of the following bill:

No. 213. Sustainable Development Goals Act

A debate ensued during which the following took part: B. Johns, who moved a hoist motion for 12 months hence. The hoist motion was debated by the following: T. Houston, C. Chender, E. Smith-McCrossin and S. Craig. The motion was defeated. The debate on third reading continued with the following: S. Leblanc, B. Adams, L. Roberts, G. Burrill, K. Irving and Hon. G. Wilson closed debate. On a recorded vote, there being 46 for and 0 opposed, the bill was forthwith read a third time. Ordered that the bill do pass and the title be as read by the Clerk. Ordered that the bill be engrossed.
